HOME DECORATION IS COMPLETE WITH THE

MENPES

SERIES OF GREAT MASTERS

13 The Broken Pitcher, Greuze.

FOR centuries Painting, unlike Literature, Music, and the Drama, had found no sufficient means of expressing itself to the world at large. Her treasures, which are immured in private galleries or lodged in National Collections, are "sealed books" to the great mass of the people unless happy accident has planted a picture gallery at their doors.

But the advent of the Menpes Series of facsimile reproductions in colour changed all that, and it may be—indeed signs are already apparent — that they will cause a revolution in the world of art as momentous as that created in the world of letters when Caxton introduced the printing press into England.
